By Philip Taubman New York Times Service MOSCOW - For the small band of Russians and Westerners that specializes in the arcane science of Kremlinology, the annual gathering of the Soviet leadership atop Lenin's Tomb on Nov. 7 is usually the high point of a dismal vear. Monday was no exception. As Mikhail S. Gorbachev led the

Kremlin leadership onto the marble mansoleum to review the Red Square parade commemorating the anniversary of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, zoom lenses and binoculars scanned through the falling snow as Kremlinologists tracked who followed him, and in what

The cluics can also be maddeningly inconclusive, as Kremlinologists know all too well But in the absence of any consis-iently reliable source of information about Kremlin politics, something that has changed hardly at all under Mr. Gorbachev, outsiders are left to sift through rumors and fragments of evidence. Given the vacuum of information, the lineup atop Lenin's Tomb is about as close as Kremlinologists get to a Rosetta stone. Monday, the 71st anniversary of

PARIS, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1988

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches CLEVELAND - Governor Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts, campaigning around the clock, crossed much of the United States on Monday to implore voters to help him win a come-from-behind victory in the presidential election Tuesday.

Arriving Monday in Ohio before sunrise, the Democratic candidate hoped his last-ditch personal appeal would help him win the state's 23 electoral votes.

After the brief rally, Mr. Dukakis flew to St. Louis, where he told supporters, "They talk a lot about Octoher surprises. Tomorrow we're going to have a November surprise. This race is very, very tight and its getting tighter by the hour."

But final surveys showed his Republican rival, Vice President George Bush, leading by four to 12, points nationwide and in more than 30 of the 50 states.

The presidential candidates were not the only ones winding up their campaigns. There were 33 Senate seals and the entire 435-member House of Representatives being filled, and 12 states were electing governors.

Democratic control of the Senate and House appeared secure, and the Democrats appeared likely to add to the 27-to-23 edge they have

Dis Assessment Press ASHLAND, Ohio - Vice President George Bush, in a hectic camlead over Governor Michael S. Du-kakis, said Monday that "the coun-try's coming in" behind his candidacy as the race for the presidency neared the finish line.

The Bush campaign mounted a last-minute television attack on Mr. Dukakis with a fierce five-minute advertisement criticizing the Massachusetts governor over his approach to issues ranging from crime to the environment.

The Bush ad, coming amid a flurry of upbeat commercials Monday, summarizes the attacks the Republican candidate has been making against his Democratic opponent in ads and in speeches throughout the campaign.

Sig Rogich, the vice president's advertising director, called the five-minute ad "a broad overview of everything that Michael Dukakis stands for.

He denied that the advertisement was introduced in response to opinion polls showing Mr. Bush's lead to be narrowing, saving the ad had been "in the works for weeks." The ad features Massachusetts residents and officials complaining about Mr. Dukakis's handling of pollution in Boston Harbor, the state's prisoner furlough program and the Massachusetts economy, including taxes, employment and hudget shortfalls. Mr. Bush does not appear in the ad.

In addition to negative ads, the two presidential camps are airing sentimental advertisements featuring flags, children and old people.

The candidates were to make their final appeals in half-hour nationally televised broadcasts on all three networks Monday night.

When it was his turn, Mr. Reagan talked about "riding into the sunset in January," then got on a buckboard pulled by a pair of bays in a rodeo parade and did just that.

It is the End of the Trail, the Last Roundup. And Mr. Reagan, who acted in Westerns and later spun a political message rooted in a romanticized version of the Western frontier, has been playing his finale with relish.

capital: the completion of a much-delayed, threeyear rebuilding project on the Poniatowski Bridge, the main route over the Vistula River. For three long summers and winters, Warsaw drivers coped not only with the blockage of a major artery through the center of town but with the sad sight of one of their most familiar landmarks undergoing major surgery. Decorative turrets were covered with scaffolding; stone columns first dedicated in 1914 stood naked on the riverbank, stripped of the viaduct they used to support. Promises that the project would be finished by Christmas last year had metted away, as had pledges to open it in the spring.

ly sought ways to stir public enthusiasm before municipal elections, a picture of the bridge appeared at the top of the morning newspaper Zycie Warszawy, together with a festive head-line: "Poniatowski Bridge - Like New." Inside, a story explained that the 640-meter (2,100-foot) bridge had been reinaugurated the previous day in a ceremony attended not only by the city's dignitaries but also by Zbigniew Messner, who was then prime minister.

That was more than four months ago, and since then much has come and gone on the pages of the Warsaw press: strikes, a new prime minister, negotiations with the opposition, promises of new reforms.

But today, just as in June, a driver who seeks to cross the Poniatowski Bridge from central War-saw will be confronted with an ugly revelation:

A Warsaw Bridge Is Symbol of Unmet Hopes and Unkept Promises Then, as the Communist authorities desperate- The same bare columns are still standing on the same forlorn riverbank, supporting thin air.

The dilapidated bridge, named for a prince who fought with valor in the Napoleonic wars, is but one of a host of failed or failing projects that have bung on the city like millstones. About 2.5 kilometers (1.5 miles) west of the Ponistowski Bridge is a towering steel-and-glass skyscraper, the second tallest building in the city, which is unfinished more than a decade after its construction began.

Another awkward, yellow-paned tower stands at the foot of one of Warsaw's grandest squares. abandoned well before the finishing stage in the 1970s. And in the southern half of the city, one whole major avenue and a host of once-bustling intersections are blocked and pitted by the city's most disruptive project, a nascent subway system

After five years of construction, the subway is Yet, even as the swath of the construction grows, long stretches of open trench appear no different to the untrained eye than they did one or two years ago.

Something similar happened to the bridge. First built over the course of 10 years just after the turn of the century, the landmark has had a history as tumultuous as Poland's. Twice in 30 years it was destroyed by warring armies. Then, after twice being rebuilt by postwar Communist authorities, the 1980s found it near collapse

Late last year, the authorities still insisted they might finish the bridge by the holiday season. But then the construction crews, citing weather

By that time, it was clear that the viaduct connecting the main trunk of the bridge to central Warsaw would not be finished anywhere near schedule. But with a desperate need for good news, the authorities decided to make a show of inaugurating the bridge anyway, organizing the ceremony for June 17.

The resulting surreal specter of the bare colunins of a bridge declared finished towering over Warsaw's busy river parkway offers morbid delight to at least one prominent Warsaw resident, Tadeusz Konwicki, a novelist.

In his 1979 comie novel about Warsaw under Communism, "A Minor Apocalypse," Mr. Konwicki portrays the Poniatowski Bridge collapsing into the Vistula as government-sponsored demconditions, decided to delay paving the bridge onstrators celebrate official economie achieveuntil spring. ## Sharon Is Militant About Regaining Defense Minister's Post

JERUSALEM - For many Arabs and their advocates, the man who sits across the desk on this sunny, temperate day in Jerusalem is the devil incarnate.

The caricatures in the Arab press still show Ariel Sharon's hands dripping with blood, his face contorted with bomicidal rage, his outstretched arm pointing the way to Israeli tanks rolling across Arab borders.

Repeatedly in Israel's brief history, he has taken on the dirty and dangerous jobs: cleaning out the Palestinian revolutionaries in the Gaza Strip, punching a hole through Egyptian armor to cross the Suez Canal in 1973, masterminding a significant expansion of Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank during the Carter administration.

And when things have been quiet, as they were in 1982, Mr. Sharon has found ways to burnish his warring image. He personally invaded Lebanon, driving his troops all the way to Beirut in an effort to destroy the Palestine Liberation Organization and anything that stood between him and that goal.

The result, although he discounts it, was a political disaster, for Israel and for Mr. Sharon.

He lost his job as defense minister and was sent into political exile. He has uprising.

stayed in the cabinet, but in jobs that give him no real influence on the questions of war and peace.

Given his way, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir would undoubtedly keep the controversial Mr. Sharon in limbo in the new government he is maneuvering to form. But the situation created by the narrow advantage that the Likud bloc gained over the Labor Party in last week's Knes-set elections has persuaded Mr. Sharon that it is time to end his exile and to seek rection his old job. Likud was founded by Mr. Sharon in 1973 and is now headed by Mr.

Mr. Sharon is a pivotal figure in the intense negotiations between Likud and the small ultra-Orthodox religious parties and rightist extremists who hold the balance of power in the new Knesset, or parliament. The religious parties trust him; the far right would follow his lead. The message, delivered in relaxed and frequently wry tones during an hour's conversation, is that Mr. Sharon is push-wraps by Likud during most of the elec-tion campaign, Mr. Sharon now vents his ing hard to become defense minister again. "People should be in the posts where they can accomplish the most," he What he does best, Mr. Sharon thinks, is to put down disorders like those that have engulfed the West Bank and Gaza for 11 months. He outlines a Sharon Plan for dealing with the Arab intifada, or

It is one part force, one part political repression and two parts expansion of Israeli ownership of the West Bank. It is, in short, a Palestinian nightmare. The West Bank and Gaza are ruled by the Defense Ministry, which issues or withholds permits for the most mundane civilian activities as well as handling in-ternal security. Israeli soldiers have killed more than 300 Palestinians and arrested more than 20,000 others during the insur-"We don't care much who is prime minister," one Palestinian activist said, "but the defense minister is really the king of the West Bank. He runs our lives or, if we are unlucky, our deaths."

Mr. Shamir is said by aides to be leaning strongly toward Moshe Arens, the former Israeli ambassador to Washington, for the defense portfolio. But as Mr. Sharon made clear, he will not surrender his claim to the job easily. Still chafing at having been kept under criticisms of bow the campaigns against the intifada have been run by the outgo-ing Labor and Likud coalition. The Labor leaders, Shimon Peres and Yitzhak Rabin, encouraged the Palestinian uprising by "inserting illusions in the hearts of the terrorist organizations," suggesting that Israel should consider a territorial compromise with the Arabs, Mr. Sharon charged. "Now, it will be very clear." he said, that in every possible solution in the future, Israel will keep the security of that area in its hands and deploy its forces all over that area, where they will enjoy freedom of action."

He also indirectly criticized Mr. Rabin, the present defense minister, for extensive use of army reserves in the unsuccessful effort to stop the wave of protests and rioting in the territories,

Mr. Sharon advocated significantly reducing the force in the territories and basing it on special military and police units that would be trained to separate "the part of the population that is involved in the terrorism from the rest of the population that wants to live a nor-mal life."

He said he had used such tactics successfully in 1970 in crushing a Palestinian revolt in Gaza. He rejected the notion, voiced by Mr. Rabin, that the current uprising has much broader political support

To help put down the intifada, Mr. Sharon would seek changes in Israeli law to protect troops from being punished for their actions in the occupied territories and shut down Arab newspapers and "front organizations." He emphasized that these changes would be done in accordance with "international law," The political steps Mr. Sharon advocates to accompany a harsher security policy involve Israeli annexation of almost all of the "high controlling territo-ry" on the ridges that dominate the Jor-dan Valley, while anilaterally imposing "autonomy" on the heavily populated Arab urban areas of the West Bank.

There would be freedom of movement between these autonomy enclaves," he said. The areas would contain 70 percent of the Arab population of the West Bank.

Mr. Sharon also called for a steppedup pace of building new Jewish settle-ments in the West Bank under the next government

"We still have to add about 30 settlements to be able to control the high controlling terrain and strategic road junctions," he said. "That will take years, WEVE Asked if he would take any other post in the government, Mr. Sharon declined to answer directly. "In more normal times, I perhaps would have preferred to be the mi of finance or the foreign minister," he said. "I could have done those jobs. But with the security problems Israel has and at a time of deterioration in our defense capability. I believe that at the present time I have to deal with defense."

Liberals Lead Poll In Canada

TORONTO — The opposi-tion Liberal Party has come from behind to take a 12-point lead over the Progressive Con-servatives led by Prime Minister Brian Malroney, two weeks before federal elections Nov. 21, according to a Gallup poll released Monday. The poll, conducted for the Toronto Star newspaper last week, gave the Liberals 43 per-cent of the vote, the Conservatives 31 percent and the socialist New Democratic Party 22. percent, with the remainder of the 1,041 respondents undecided

"Never in the 48 years that Gallup has been monitoring Canadian federal elections has a party experienced such a ampaign reversal in support," Lorne Bozinoff, a Galiup vice president, said in a written analysis. Last week, the previous Gallup poll showed the Conservatives leading with 38 per-cent, ahead of the Liberals with 32 percent and the New Democrats with 27 percent.

The turnaround was attributed to growing public concern over a free-trade agree-ment between Mr. Mulroney's government and the United States, and to strong performances by John Turner, the Liberal leader, in recent televised debates.

Koreans Vilifying Ex-President Chun

Demands for His Arrest Intensify

By Susan Chira New York Times Service SEOUL - From students to husinessmen to politicians, the people of South Korea are turning angrily, sometimes violently, against the former president, Chun Doo Hwan.

Less than a year after he left office. Mr. Chun, who ruled as an aloof and widely feared autocrat, remains the central issue in Korean domestic politics. No longer can Mr. Chun shape his country's fate; the nation instead is wrestling with Students across South Korea have been demonstrating to call for Mr. Chun's arrest on charges of corruption and human-rights violations. For the first time since widespread protests forced Mr. Chun to agree to democratic changes in June 1987, the students have drawn broad support, culminating in na-tionwide demonstrations Saturday in which crowds cheered students as they fought riot policemen.

Seoul, was quiet Sunday, and families strolled in the autumn sunshine down clean streets that on Saturday were littered with broken glass and rocks.

The protest, according to West-ern diplomats and Korean commentators, poses no immediate threat to the government of Presi-dent Roh Tae Woo, a longtime political associate and army colleague of Mr. Chun. But public indignation is mounting over new accounts of corruption and brutality in Mr. Chun's temure, and Mr. Chun's name still evokes passions, even among well-dressed businessmen who deplore student violence but support their cause. "All the good work he has done in the past had dissolved into air,"

Mr. Chun's younger hrother is in jail for embezzlement and his prop-

South Koreans have heard for the first time how at least 54 people died in army-run labor camps set up hy Mr. Chun after he seized power in 1980, and bow military security agents physically abused the heads of Korean newspapers and television stations to force them to give up their companies and make it easier for the government to control news.

The nation is looking into a dark past, and that could be politically explosive because Mr. Roh's govmment contains many holdovers from Mr. Chun who may oppose a complete unveiling of the past. And Mr. Roh risks being criticized as a prime mover of a legacy he now repudiates. Yet, students and many other Koreans demand an accounting be-cause they believe that past failures to punish abusers opened the way to authoritarian rule. Most Koreans agree on their feelings about Mr. Chun but are split on what his fate should be.

The Afghan Deadline

There is cause for alarm in Afghanistan, and it is that so little progress has been made in forming a government to replace the puppet regime that the Soviet Union will leave behind when, assuming it sticks to its Geneva commitment, it finishes with-drawing its forces by next Feb. 15. The political void - call it the Feb. 16 problem - is no less worrisome than the hard military endgame the Kremlin now is playing. The danger is not simply that Soviet troops will stay — a development that would have ominous implications for the whole next stage in Soviet-American relations - but that a bitter war will go on when they leave. Moscow, needless to say, is trying to rig things, talking tough and hoping that its Geneva commitment to withdrawal will di-vert international attention from its unchanged basic status as an aggressor in Afghanistan. It favors reaching a political solution before its troops withdraw, but it will remain in a position to apply serious material and political leverage afterward. Pakistan, conducting a traditional pol-icy of reducing the pull of Afghan Pash-tuns on its own Pashto-speaking tribe-speople, has sought to build up non-Pachera Afghan Pashto-speaking tribe-Pashtun Afghans. But resistance fighters of other tribal and ideological persuasions have their own notions of a settlement.

Pakistan, too, has resources to support its post-Feb. 15 policy, not least its ability to steer U.S. aid to the Afghan resistance.

Is there a way to head off the protracted post-withdrawal agony now promised by the passion of the different Afghans and by their access to ontside aid? One part of the struggle would fade away if the Kabul regime collapsed. Evidently all the resistance factions mean to test whether the regime can survive the scheduled completion of Soviet withdrawal on Feb. 15.

Even if the regime goes down, however, the resistance factions will have their own fierce strains. So either way, there will be a paramount need for a conciliation process. Only one seems even remotely feasible - the UN initiative for a "cooling off" period and formation of a neutral caretaker government to handle refugees and to prepare for the next, permanent political stage. Currently the UN initiative is on hold. At

The electronic networks that distribute grams submitted for transmission. But mail between computers are as vulnerabla to sabotage as the Postal Service. The letter bomb of the computer age is a program that clogs up or damages recipient computers. Last week, one closed down thousands of computers at universities and U.S. government laboratories from coast to coast. A hacker's pastime has become a peril.

The current wave of destructive programs are known as computer viruses, which is what they spread like inside com-puters — and then outside, through computer networks. The copies can consume so much memory that the infected computers slow down or even shut out their users.

. The perpetrator of the latest virus is a Cornell University graduate student who, his friends have said, meant to infect but not disrupt an academic computer network sponsored by the Defense Department. Through a design error, the program copied itself far faster than intended.

Unlike military networks, which can be accessed only from guarded terminals, academic computer networks are designed for ease of access. The price of openness is vulnerability. The Cornell virus exploited an error in the network's software that has now been patched. But persistent programmers can doubtless find other entry points. What can be done to avoid widespread disruptions like this, or the worse calamities that might result from sabotage? One possibility is to screen the pro-with reason, the operators of public networks do not relish the idea of reading their users' mail. A sentinel program that looked for rapid duplication of the same message among network users would find it hard to discriminate between virus propagation and a legitimate mass mailng. Even if a virus could be identified, it might have done much of its damage by the time it was detected. It is probably the responsibility of com-puter owners to protect themselves. Some systems pass all communications through a filter. Carnegie-Mellon University inoculated its computers five years ago with a program that recognized and fended off a Massachusetts bug. A score of anti-viral programs or "vaccines" are commercially available. But the vaccines may only induce development of more advanced viruses designed to defeat them, since some hackers evidently consider it an interesting challenge to bring down a network. The Cornell virus was a highly sophisticated, 60,000-byte program, designed to de-code encrypted passwords in the Unix operating system and masquerade with them as a legitimate user. It has wasted thousands of hours as computer operators purged it from their systems. But its consequences will ultimately be benign if the epidemic alerts computer owners to the need to prepare against future assaults.

U.S. presidential elections is by now obvious to everyone but the Federal Election Commission, the agency charged with en-forcing the rules. This year's brazen cheating by both presidential candidates dramatizes the need for Congress to strengthen both the agency and the law. To qualify for $46.1 million each in public moncy, Michael Dukakis and George Bush promised to forgo all private fund raising and abide by the presidential spending ceiling. The law does allow state party funds to be used for "party buildbut neither federal nor state officials strictly police such spending. In practice, a distinct set of ledgers is all that has separated the official bare-bones campaign staff in most crucial states from the slush-funded state committees. The flimsy distinction mocks the spirit of public financing, yet both the Bush and the Dukakis campaigns have aggressively pursued the slush, commonly called soft money. The better term is sewer money.

Working wealthy donors for big contributions and then channeling the money to state parties to pay for field operations freed both candidates to spend more of their public funds on television. In Texas, the Republicans' "Victory '88" committee boasted a $3.9 million budget and nine times the staff of the official Bush campaign. Likewise, the Dukakis campaign in illinois employed five workers, while the Democrats' "Campaign '88" group, operatic financing for ing from the same offices, employed 115.

Thus, as the campaign ends, it is estimated that each candidate has raised an astounding $50 million in sewer money - five times more than the total for both candidates in 1984. The dismaying spectacle prompts some regrettable suggestions that public financing be climinated. But if anything the sight of presidential candidates hustling $100,000 checks at endless fund-raising galas only confirms the need for public finance.

The FEC has proved an ineffective mechanism for reform, in large measure because it has become transfixed by the needs of the parties while losing sight of the broader public interest. Congress needs to look at ways to make the agency more indepen-dent, and to make the law tougher - at least recognizing that the vast sums flowing to state party accounts in presidential election years hugely benefit the national campaigns and ought be regulated accordingly. Senator Wendell Ford of Kentucky and Representative Al Swift of Washington head the relevant committees. It will be up to them to lead the fight next January to restore integrity to the public financing system. Or will they let the sewer continue to overflow? - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A Campaign Blind to Asia

The only mention Asia gets is in innuen-dos about the "threat" of foreign trade and investment. If Americans spurn their privileged relationship with Asian trading partners, they will find their prosperity and contentment the losers.

According to pollsters, voters do nurse a deep, inarticulate anxiety about mortgaging their children's future for the sake of a consumer-happy status quo today. They've heard the talk about a relative decline of American clout in the world, and understand that you can't keep getting and spending without a large bill coming due. The other anxiety is that America's ethnic mix is changing to the detriment of tradition-al culture. President Reagan succeeded largely by standing up for motherhood, church and "family values." In a country where one of every two marriages ends in divorce, the old values happen to be largely a myth. Still, white middle-class Americans seem to put Asians in the category of threat, even though it's precisely the Asian immigrants whose values are most compatible with the older culture that uplifted America. Once their energies and views percolate up through the political system, the United States may focus its attention on a part of the world with the promise of being its source of renewal and most productive partnership.

Bush Has the Experience

I F you believe in the importance of an effective foreign policy, then you should hope that George Bush will stay in Washington next year and Michael Dakakis will remain in Boston. To the degree that experience in foreign affairs is important, and it is, Mr. Bush has had more varied opportunities to learn than almost any previous presidential asoirant. Mr. Dukakis has had none.

The case for George Bush does not rest on exp alone, Ideas and philosophy also count. So much has been written about Governor Dukakis's onetime espousal of a nuclear freeze, and his opposition to the Strategic Defense Initiative, the Midgetman missile, the invasion of Grenada and the attack on Libya that little more need be said about his awareness of the importance of power in world politics. The governor of Massachusetts appears to be a part of the school that blames the United States if the world is out of kilter. People who think that way sometimes play a useful role; devil's advocacy has its place. But that place, emphatically, is not the presidency.

- Lawrence S. Engleburger, undersecretary of state from 1982 to 1984, writing in The New York Times.

HIS November will not necessarily be remembered as the last hurrah for the World War II generation. The Bush candidacy embodies their aspirations as well as their legacy. He seeks the office on the threshold of a new century. As the Cold War winds down and competition for world markets heats up, George Bush is America's point man positioned to direct the Reagan momentum toward a hroad trade offensive aimed at re-establishing American begemony in the global marketplace. That is where the country's economic future lies. To capture it will require imagination, rigor, a sleeves-rolled-up national posture. That's something the World War II types will understand.

- C. H. Broley in the Los Angeles Times.

Dukakis Has the Plans

DOUBT that many people enjoyed this campaign. Michael Dukakis wanted to make it a discussion of competence and vision, based on the hard facts of an open record and well defined substantive positions. George Bush decided he was better off hiding himself and his record from the people. He did it effectively, with a campaign of distortions, evasion and lies. He spent millions of dollars brandishing the word "liberal" but was afraid to face Governor Dukakis on a platform to debate what it meant.

One of the saddest aspects of the last few months is that so many experts criticized Mr. Dukakis as being naive for expecting anything better from a political campaign. On Tuesday we will learn whether the experts and George Bush are right: that if it works, it's acceptable, and that lies work in political campaigns. I believe that Americans are going to insist on a higher standard. Mr. Dukakis knows that while we're still the greatest nation in the world, we face serious challenges. He understands — as does practically every reputable economist — that something more must be done about our continuing among his supporters because he clearly not Ronald Reagan.

Nor ara any of the above politicians Harry Truman, although a Martian flown in for the close of the campaign could be forgiven for thinking that the fiercely partisan Truman was the patron saint of both parties. Mr. Reagan, who as a Demo-crat voted for Mr. Truman in 1948, presented him as a Republican hero, conveniently forgetting that Mr. Truman favored an interventionist central government arrayed on the side of those least abla to help themselves. In a campaign where few Americans seem to care for anyone except possibly Mr. Reagan and Mr. Bentsen, Mr. Truman's current popularity should be instructive. He left the deficit and growing debt. He has plans to deal with a declining work force, a lack of affordable housing, a need for health care and the renewal of infrastructure. He has in place one of the best state anti-drug programs in the nation.

- Mario M. Cuomo, Democratic governor of New York State since 1983, writing in The New York Times.

"Have you no sense of decency, sir? At long last, have you left no sense of decency?" With these words, ad-dressed to Senator Joseph R. McCarthy in the midst of the Army-McCarthy hearings, the lawyer Joseph N. Welch awakened a nation. The date was June 9, 1954.

The same question could be addressed to George Bush today. It would spotlight the level of indecency that has marked the Bush campaign, for which Mr. Bush and his mentor, James Baker, are basically responsible. The sneering attacks by President Reagan and Mr. Bush on liberalism — the philosophy that is the basis of Ameri-can democracy — set the evil tone of this campaign. It panders to the smouldering instincts of the mob, ready to unclude using the next experiments of the mob, ready to explode when the next economic crisis bursts upon us. When that times comes, the way will have been paved for a ind for "strong" leadership. It is a dangerous game. -John B. Oakes in The New York Times.

A Country of Grasshoppers

Dukakis, his brow dark with portent, warning people about the future implications of the deficit. He tells them that they are mortgaging the future of their children. Yet there is little evidence that Americans fret a great deal about leaving the bill for their kids. Americans are the least provident people in the Western world. Savings rates are at an all-time low. Credit card indebtedness is at an all-time high, and the dog-in-the-manger ethic among the elderly is "I've got mine, Jack," But Mr. Dukakis persists in trying to reform this nation of high-rolling grasshoppers whose mot-to is "sufficient unto the day" into sober and diligent ants. -Ross K, Baker in the Los Angeles Times.

A CLA Alumnus as President?

AVE American voters really thought about the impli-H cations of electing a president who once was director of the CIA? Questions about Vice President George Bush transcend the specific issue of how much he knew about the drug trafficking and other criminal activities of the CIA's paid "asset," General Manuel Noriega of Panama. If elected, Mr. Bush will be the first occupant of that secretive and sometimes compromised post ever to win the White House, or to aspire to it, or even to become active in elective politics. The agency, over the years, has earned an unenviable reputation for political meddling, subversion of governments, parties and politicians, dealings with crooks and dictators like General Noriega, setting Cold War advantage over local interests, and frequent violence.

Mr. Bush once presided over all that -a fact that lends itself to exploitation by those who wish America no good.

- Tom Wicker in The New York Times.

FDR died that "this brave and fearless man, capable of taking the great-est decisions," knew so hitle of what was going on that his position was one of "extreme difficulty."

Perhaps Mr. Truman is not spinning in his grave, after all. Ha was a keen student of history who would douhtless scoff at the ignorance of those who view the 1988 campaign as an unprecedented descent into negativism. He was described by his adversaries in 1948 as a "jackass."

That is ancient history to most of the news media deployed for the 1988 battle. But only eight years ago, Jim-my Carter said it would be a "catastrophe" if Mr. Reagan, a man as underestimated as Mr. Truman, were elected. "You'll determine whether or not this America will be unified or, if I lose this election, whether Ameri-cans might be separated black from white, Jew from Christian, North from South," Mr. Carter said.

No, it is not negativism that stands out in 1988. That is a given of the American political condition, conveniently erased from the collective consciousness each four years so that the nation can go about its business. What makes this campaign special not what the candidates say about each other but how hitle they reveal of themselves. What is repellent is not the name-calling but the slippery eva-sions of the real issues by candidates who will not say how they will pay for national defense or explain what they would do about the deficit.

The campaigns in which Mr. Tru-man prevailed in 1948 and Mr. Reagan prevailed in 1980 were nasty affairs, but the winning candidates told Americans what they would try to do and why they would do it. Both of the nominees in 1988 are decent men, but they have not leveled with the people. The problem with their campaigns is not negativism but emptiness.

Kennedy led the derision of the opposition's wimpish character with his booming "Where was George?" That was Three. Then came Laurei & Hardy's turn. First, at the New Orleans convention, came the Pledge of Allegiance and the "issue" of Mr. Dukakis vetoing the bill to require teachers to lead it. Signal: The Duke was unpatriotic. On top of that came the "furlough issue": soft on crime. Retribution for the attack on Robert Bork came with the discovery that Mr. Dukakis once identified himself as "a card-carrying member of the ACLU." Never mind that he made that statement as part of an anti-pornography remark; as part of an anti-pornography remark; be was thus tagged with the always un-popular ACLU agenda, compounded recently by that organization's plunge into judicial and elective politics. (A huge ACLU anti-Reagan fund-raising mailing late in the campaign was of no help at all to Mr. Dukakis.)

Then into Boston Harbor steamed George Bush, holding aloft a copy of The Boston Herald blasting the Dukakis re-cord on water pollution. Even unto the last weekend of the campaign, the Republican candidate was using as his fa-vorite prop at rallies the headline of The Herald — "What a Mess!" — to demonstrate that the Duke was seen as a failure in his own hometown. Thus did the Ken-nedy media "victory" visit the Murdoch vengeance on the Democratic candidate. Laurel and Hardy, played hy Roger Ailes and Robert Teeter, are smiling at their devastation of the neighbor's house. Now here comes the Democratic neighbor, with an ax, to show what can be done to their car. On election night, if the returns show the expected Bush mini-landslide, the first words out of the mouths of reelected congressional Democrats will be "This is no mandate." Bitter wits will say "The only Bush mandate is to give the death penalty without furlough to anybody who refuses to say the Pledge." The cliché of the evening will be "shortest honeymoon in history." That's because Democrats in Congress are furi-ous - not just disappointed, but really angry — at having an election they thought was won three months ago stolen by a gut-kicking, low-blow cam-paign. If Mr. Bush does not all hut surrender to liberalism in his inaugural address, they'll teach him a thing or two about hardball politics.

As the man said watching robots build robots, where will it all end? Do we have to play this funny movie out to the last few frames of wholesale political destruction?

No. In the American system, a onevote margin is a mandate to lead. The man who wins is the president of all the people, expected to have a few good ideas and entitled to a honeymoon of at least a few months. Break the vicious cycle. O.K. with you, Stan and Oliver? : The New York Times.

Let All Whales Be Free Ethics of Arab 'Transfer'

Regarding the report "A Revived Cause: "Transfer" of Arabs" (Nov. 4): Speaking about "transfer" (a euphe-mism for forced expulsion of the re-maining Arabs of Palestine), Rehavam Zeevi, whose Moledet Party has just won two Knesset seats, is quoted as arguing: "We came to conquer land and settle it. If transfer is not ethical, then everything we have done bere for 100 years is wrong." Exactly. If one views the conquest and colonization of Palestine and the dispossession and dispersal of the Palestinian people as an ethical undertaking (or, more simply, as a good thing), then there is no reason to flinch at pursuing the process to its logical conclusion.

If, however, one recognizes the logical conclusion as being unethical, then one is obligated to reconsider the ethics of what has already been done to the Palestinian people in this century, of what is being done to them every day, and of America's continuing role in making it possible. Which in itself is not unusual. Heading off to the ranch was a major function of the Gipper administration. And why not? YOU try sitting around the White House, thinking about stuff like the trade imbalance for days on end. Especially when you don't really have to. Hey, you're the president! Any time you want, you can just say. "The hell with the trade imbalance! I want to go to the ranch!"

And right away a major government branch of the world's most powerful nation swings into Priority Action Mode, providing you with: a going-away ceremony, a helicopter, a jet, armed security people using secret radio frequencies, butlers, maids, a motorcade and — best of all — a STAFF, smart guys wearing suits who will continue to think about the trade imbalance for you while you ride your horse, so that when you're done they could bring you items to sign and approve, important items that appear in the paper like this: "SANTA BARBARA - President Reagan today signed an order authorizing a measure that would reverse a section of a provision that would elimi-nate a $3.7 million reduction in the proposed fiscal 1989 budgetary increase for the Intermonetary Trade Amalgamation and Ramification Administration. In a prepared statement, the president said blah blah hlah."

Of course the prepared statement doesn't actually say "blah hlah hlah," but it might as well. I mean, do YOU read those stories? Neither do I, I think we regular citizens tend to be more interested in stories we can grasp the signifi-cance of, such as did Mike Tyson, or did Mike Tyson not, throw Rohin Givens out their mansion window.

Compared with this kind of gripping human drama, the activities of the federal government seem confusing and remote. We know it's there, hut we don't have a lot of direct contact with it, except when a Postal Service employee takes time out from his busy schedule to sell us stamps. We tend to be detached from our government. Just like President Reagan.

The news media pointed this out for years. "President Reagan has a detached management style," they kept saying, because they couldn't come right out and say what they meant, which was: "President Reagan apparently does not know, nor much care, what is going on." They were always presenting examples of this, Like the time Mr. Reagan turned to Samuel Pierce, who was secretary of housing and urban development and therefore, no question about it, a mem-ber of the cabinet, and said: "Mr. Mayor, how are thing: going in your city?" R ONALD Reagan has never been reluctant to take time off, and he recognizes that his reputation as a non-workaholic is secure. Last year he quipped that he knew hard work never killed anyone, but "I figure, why take the chance." There is a deceptive quality of unconcern to such one-liners. He cares deeply about what happens after he leaves office. He has told The Washington Post that a Bush victory is as important to him as winning his own races was in 1980 and 1984. That statement testified both to Mr. Reagan's ideological commitment and to a personal security that is rare in the Oval Office. "There are going to be many more occupants of the White House and Reagan knows it," says the White House political director, Frank Donatelli, "He's not trying to squeeze every last ounce of preside or power out of the office. No surprise there. Mr. Gorbachev, head of the party since March 1985 and president of the country since Oct. 1, is clearly the dominant leader. With the retirement of Andrei A. Gromyko as president this fall, and the addition of that job to

Mr. Gorbachev's portfolio, Mr. Ryzhkov ranks second in protocol. Last year, as some astute Kremhinologists noted, the trio of Mr. Gorbachev, Mr. Gromyko and Mr.

Ryzhkov was separated from the rest of the Politburo by a threesecond gap as members appeared at the front of the tomb, a pregnant pause that seemed designed to un-derline protocol distinctions.

Or had the others simply fallen behind because someone tripped coming up the stairs?

"Watch it closely on Monday and we'll see," a top Western Kremlinologist told reporters during a briefing at a Western embassy last week.

Last year was the first time we spotted the gap." Sure enough, Mr. Gorbachev and Mr. Ryzhkov appeared in view first, and their colleagues held back, apparently following careful-by planed store directions

The key question was who would follow Mr. Ryzhkov up the steps — Yegor K. Ligachev, whose status as the No. 2 party leader has been in doubt in recent months, or Lev N, Zaikov, whose star has been rising lately. The answer was Mr. Ligachev Was the answer definitive? Yes, and no.

As third in line, Mr. Ligachev certainly retained his protocol position as the third-ranking member of the leadership.

But when the leaders arrayed themselves on the tomb to watch the parade, Mr. Zaikov, the former head of the Leningrad party organization, stood immediately to Mr. Gorbachev's right, while Mr. Ligachev was two places to the Soviet leader's left, with Mr. Ryzhkov between them. Or is the spot occupied by Mr. sented him.

"He genuinely likes George Bush," said Marlin Fitzwater, the president's press spokesman. "And he's truly angry at Dukakis for mis-leading people about his liberal bebers and about the Reagan record." Returning recently from a cam-paign swing in California and other states, he was told by Kenneth Duberstein, Mr. Reagan's chief of staff, that the polls showed that the race in California was close. Mr. Fitzwater said Mr. Reagan looked up from his papers and said, "I want to go back." And he was to travel 11 hours Monday to spend two hours at rallies.

On Friday, at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, the president's aides tried to get him to cancel a helicopter trip to a rally in Palos Hills, Illinois, because it was raining so hard. "If 10 people are there, I am going," Mr. Reagan said, insisting that they wait to see if the rain let up. It did, and they went. Mr. Bush concedes he may new be as good at moving crowds as Mr. Reagan, and his tough-guy lines like "Read my lips" can sound forced. The president, however, of-fers his in a soft voice with the timing of a professional, and the audiences erupt in wild applause. "Violent crime has fallen significantly since 1981," he said at Moraine Valley Community College in Palos Hills, Illinois, because we put the bad guys on notice: Make one false move and the next sound you hear is the clang of a jail cell door slamming shut."

card If Mr. Reagan went through a period of despondency after the Iran-contra scandal and his cancer operations, believing that the American public might never sup-port him as much as they once did, he has banished all such self-doubts with his triumphant "last, burrah" campaign swing.

All along the president's motorcade routes, from Voorhees, New Jersey, to Macomb County, Michi-gan, people rushed out of their offices and homes, hoisting their childreo oo their shoulders. president," read one in New Jersey, "Reagan for Rushmore," read one in Ohio. "Reagan for Pope," read one in Pennsylvania. "But I'm oot Catholic," the president murmured wryly, when he saw the sign from his car.

He is clearly moved. After a rally in Voorhees the other day, Mr. Reagan made his exit amid fireworks, motorized sky divers, balloons and gigantic moving flags. He stopped one last time to survey the 7,000 cheering Republicans. "I hate to leave," he told Pete Dawkins, the New Jersey Senate candidate who was on stage with

Mr. Dawkins said: "I think his remark had a double meaning, about the raily and about the White House. His eyes were glistening.". The president, whose hair for the first time is showing streaks of gray, has plans for the next two months. continue to stay active, whether it's speaking ont on the repeal of the 22d Amendment about a president being limited to two terms, the balanced budget amendment or the line item veto."

He will go back to where his political career began, the "mashed potato circuit" of dinner speeches. Mr. Reagan has always been one of the few politicians to use that term with genuine fondness.

When Mr. Duberstein sums up the president's mood, he recalls a moment driving through a small town in Wisconsin a while back when Mr. Reagan noticed a movie marquee showing one of his old Westerns, "Tennessee's Partner." "That was the one I was killed he told Mr. Duberstein. "Tin lying there dead and these guys come up and say over my body, 'And we didn't even know his 19me

Play on Austrian Past Stirs Vienna Uproar

VIENNA - A play accusing Austrians of being anti-Semites and Nazis had a tumultuous premiere here, punctuated with boos and catcalls. After the performance of Thomas Bernhard's "Heldenplatz" the audience in the Burgtheater jeered and cheered the cast, the playwright, and the director Claus Peymann for 45 minutes. "Shouts of "Insolence!" and "God Save Austria!" erupted in the auditorium during the four-hour performance, watched over by security guards called in by the management of the Burg, Austria's principal state theater.

Leading politicians, including President Kurt Waldheim and of Wales, whose previous trips were Foreign Minister Alois Mock, condemned the play before the premiere on the basis of extracts in the press. Before the premiere brief stopovers to launch an Airbus and to visit the Cannes film festibegan Friday, activists dumped a pile of manure outside the theater on the Ringstrasse.

"In Austria to be a Jew means always to be condemned to death," one of the characters says. "The Viennese are Jew-haters and they will remain Jew-haters for all eternity." Waldheim, found by a commission of historians to have covered up his service as a World War II German Army intelligence officer, is denounced as a "crafty, lying lowbrow."

Practically no one in the country is spared in Bernhard's text, including Chancellor Franz Vranitzky, the Roman Catholic Church, the labor unions, and what it calls the "mediocrity" of Austrian newspapers and universities.

The Heldenplatz of the title is the square in which hundreds of thousands of Viennese thronged in 1938 to cheer Hitler's arrival. The play deals with a Jewish professor who fled but returns in March of 1988 to find Austria little changed. "Conditions are really like they were in '38 and now there are more Nazis in Vienna than in '38," the academic's daughter says.

Peymann, a West German, has provoked Austrian anger since taking over last year as director of the Burgtheater, where he has enlivened the repertory with contemporary stagings of classic works and plays dealing with Austria's wartime past.

He commissioned "Heldenplatz" to mark the centenary of the theater's present building. He likened the row it set off to that over Arthur Schnitzler's play about Austrian antipathy to Jews, "Professor Bernhardi," the premiere of which was delayed from 1912 to 1918 because it was banned under the Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

has not acted on that request. A period of one year had been suggested by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, which had decided to force the sale because of concern that Kuwait would act in its own interest as opposed to the interests of BP and the British public.

The possible delay served to depress stockholders, who fear a long period of uncertainty, and American Depository Receipts For BP fell 62.5 cents Friday, to $52.75. They rose to $53 on Monday. On the London Stock Exchange, BP shares were off 1 penny at 247 pence ($4.36), up from 240.5 pence a month earlier. Each of BP's American Depository Receipts on the New York Stock Exchange represents 12 ordinary shares traded in London. BP has been a nightmare for international investors for more than a year, since the government unloaded a 31.5 percent stake in the company. That was sold just as world markets collapsed, and the underwriters wound up with huge losses. Finally, the government offered to take the shares back, at a substantial discount to the price it had received, but received just a small fraction of them. That was because Kuwait was buying.

S INCE the end of September 1987, British Petroleum's share price has declined 28 percent in dollar terms, by far the biggest drop of any major international oil company. Most big oil stocks have risen 10 percent or more in 1988, notwith-standing the drop in the price of crude, but BP is off 6 percent. Mr. Leuffer of C.J. Lawrence contends the stock is cheap by oil

Alaska and the North Sea, two areas with little political risk. As for fears of the overhang, he said, "We think investors are being paid very well to take the risk."

Kuwait's investment was mostly in partly paid shares, and as a result it will be sending 52.3 billion to the British government next spring to finish paying for the shares it bought. The government wants Kuwait to cut its stake from 21.7 percent to 9.9 percent, which would result in a loss of more than $500 million if it sold at current prices. At those prices, and before paying the additional money in the spring, the shares are worth about $3.5 billion. What will happen to the Kuwaiti shares? BP says it is aware of lodustrie.

The move opens the way for a major restructuring of the West German aerospace and military industries.

Economics Minister Martin Bangemann said the cabinet had approved the plan, enabling Daim-ler-Benz AG, the largest West German industrial concern, to acquire a 30 percent stake in Messerschmidt-Bölkow-Blohm GmbH, the largest aerospace concern. Daimler still must approve the plan. The company's supervisory board will meet to discuss it on Wednesday. While approval is expected, the company's unions bave objected to the plan, cootending that it will result in lost jobs through restructuring and could burt Daimler's traditional core business, producing Mercedes cars and trucks.

Should Daimler approve, it will be transformed into West Germaoy's largest aerospace and military contractor, with annual sales of more than 80 billion DM. fts product line would run from hair dryers to surface-to-air missiles.

"The cabinet has approved the outline for a restructuring of the German civil aviation industry according to the plan I outlined last week," Mr. Bangemann said, refer-ring to the cabinet meeting oo Nov. 2 at which his fellow Free Democrats blocked passage, citing ideological objections. Mr. Bangemann was chairman of the Free Democratic Party until October. He added that clarifications had been made on five points to over-come the party's doubts about the Airbus subsidies.

The changes, Mr. Bangemann said, found approval with himself and other cabinet ministers because they constitute only affirmatioos and "clarifications" of what was already contained to the original language of the plan.

If Daimler approves the plan, it

The chairman of Burger King, Jerry Levin, said Monday that he expected the company's earnings to be depressed because of a heavy debi load created by Pillsbury's spin-off.

He said the company's operating earnings were not expected to return to the level of fiscal 1988 until the end of fiscal 1990, ending May

Mr. Levin said he hoped that Burger King's sales, which have declined for the past three years, would show improvement some ume in 1989.

Burger King accounts for about one-third of Pillsbury's sales and about two-thirds of its profits, but in the year to May 31, the chaio's pretax profits plunged more than 50 percent, to $48.2 million.

Mr. Levin became chairman of the chain in October, as part of a management reshuffling by Pills-speculation that it might buy back some, despite the heavy tax penalty it would incur, but will not comment on the question.

Mr. Icahn, who is chairman of TWA and owns 90 percent of the airline, said in a statement that "there is no question TWA must grow to thrive" and that "by far the most preferable way to grow" is through acquisitions.

He said that unless an acquisition of major importance was made. TWA would order 30 to 60 narrow-body aircraft in the next three to six months. The statement also indicated that the aircraft could be ordered even if TWA made an acquisition.

TWA also said it was restructuring senior management. Jerry Nichols, former senior vice president of ground operations, was named executive vice president, a director and a member of the newly formed Office of the Chairman which also includes Mr. Icahn and Alfred Kingsley, a TWA director.

Mr. Corr joined TWA in April 1986 as vice chairman and became president in January 1987. He will remain a director of TWA.

Midland Stake ۲Ì In Italian Bank Is Discussed

Agence From e-Presse LONDON — Midland Bank said Monday that it was negotiating with the Itabian investment bank Euromobiliare about possibly increasing its stake in the Italian bank. We consider Italy a key market," a bank spokesman said. "We have a 3 percent stake in Euromobiliare, and it is one of the options available, on taking a controlling stake. The report said Midland would probably pay about 90 billion lire ($68 million) to raise its stake from 3.14 percent to around 40 percent, making Midland a major pres-ence in Italian finance.

Hyundai is testing the Canadian market before selling the Sonata in the United States. The new model was officially introduced in Windsor on Oct. 17, but will not reach U.S. showrooms until late November or early December. The strategy has been used be-fore. In the early 1980s, when it was still unknown as an antomaker, Hyundai introduced the rear-drive Pony model in Canada. Attracted by the low price of the Pony, Canadians quickly made it the leading anto import, although sales dropped sharply after problems with the model became known. Hyundai tried moving out of the low end of the market once before, when it tested the Stellar in Canada. The model, originally designed for the South Korean market, failed to impress many Canadian buyers. Hyundai withdrew the model after it, too, developed qualnpeting hid. Valeo was offering interesting for everybody, except Agenue France-Presse PARIS - Valeo SA, the French 1,200 francs ($197), including a 700-franc convertible bond, com-pared with 1,250 francs per share auto components group, announced Monday that it was drop-ping its hostile bid for Epéda-Ber-trand Faure, a maker of car seats, weapons, luggage and bedding.

The chairman of Valco, Noët Goulard, said the concern would give up its takeover bid to avoid "wild hidding" for Epeda. Valeo has been effectively controlled for two years by the Italian business-man Carlo de Benedetti.

Mr. Goutard said he would withdraw his bid for 58.8 percent of Epéda's capital as soon as a competing bid from a group led Epé-da's chairman, Pierre Richier, receives approval from authorities to make it irrevocable.

coaster ride for Canadian Hyundai dealers. In the first nine months of 1987, they sold 40,000 cars. With the Pony and Stellar off the market, only 24,000 Hyundais were sold in the comparable period this year.

carlier. Since both the Sonata and Excel are based on designs by Mitsubishi Motor Co. of Japan, which is affiliated with Hyundai, the cars have no significant technical advantage over Mitsubishi imports. Bot Hyundai again plans to use price as its main selling point.

In Canada the basic Sonata GL model sells for 12,999 Canadian dollars ($10,600), about 3,000 dollars less than comparable Honda or Toyota models.

Despite the low price, the basic model is not stripped down. The Sonata GL comes with power steering, a tilt steering wheel, an electric window defroster and an AM-FM radio with a cassette player. "That's a lot of car for the money." Mr. Homer said. "Hyundai didn't just underprice those others by a little. They planned all along to underprice by a wide margin."

HIGH YIELD

ince its beginning more than 20 years ago, advertising in Institutional Investor has always been a sound investment. Now, the leading magazine in the finance and investment field offers a higher yield than ever.

In 1989, II will introduce its new INVESTMENT MATCH PROGRAM. Advertisers who take advantage of this program will be able to reach Institutional Investor's universe of 544,000 readers with both impact and frequency-AND AT A VERY FAVORABLE COST.

Next year, all advertisers who increase their advertising schedule in II by a minimum of one insertion over 1988 levels will receive free equivalent advertising to match their incremental advertising investment. This applies to schedules in both U.S. and International Editions.

For example:

'An advertiser who increases its 1988 four-time schedule by two insertions to six in 1989 will receive two additional matching insertions free. A total of eight insertions at the cost of only six.

'An advertiser who ran only once in 1988 can triple that investment by adding only one more page and getting the third free.

When you are planning your advertising portfolio for 1989, be sure to consider Institutional Investor for the best yield on your advertising dollars and for its delivery of a very select audience of decision makers at the very highest level in the financial and investment community.

RED KAPLANS "Dickens" is the first full-scale biography of the novelist since Edgar Johnson's two-volume life appeared in 1952. It would be valuable if only because it takes into account the reams of research that have been published in the intervening years; but it is also well proportioned, persussive in its judgments and Sales well proportioned, persitiate in its jurgenents and consistently, grippingly readable. At one level Dickens's career was a literary success story without precedent (in large part because before his time there had never been a mass readership on the scale of the one to which he appealed). To have come so far, đ.

and so fast: Even he was startled, as Kaplan says, by the "explosive release of energy and talent" that in three base years, between the ages of 22 and 25, transformed him from an unknown reporter into an internationally celebrated writer.

His beginnings were dingy, cramped and insecure. He died, rich and famous, in his house at Gad's Hill, in Kent - the same house that his father had pointed out to him when he was a child, telling him that if he worked hard, on b when he was a chuc, reiming min that it he worken hard, he "might some day come to live in it"; the same Gad's Hill that figures in the Falstaff sequences of "Henry IV."

man Inned.
The story has a fairy-tale quality. Yet it was a fairy tale without an authentic happy ending, as he himself knew, none better. He once described himself in his notebooks as a man "always, as it were, playing hide and seek with the world, and never finding what Fortune seems to have hidden when he was born."

When he was born, or at any rate when he was very young. Kaplan tracks Dickens's troubles back to the .

unhealed wounds of childhood, as any biographer, give the evidence, must — to the sense of his father's inad quacy and his ruther's seeming indifference, both con-verging in their decision to consign him to a black factory when he was 12. The story is a familiar one, bu Dickens himself was so much under its spell that it los none of its power in the retelling. If Kaplan does justice to Dickens' inner life, it isn't the expense of his public career. He writes with equivisor about Dickens the social reformer, Dickens as father, Dickens in his often stormy dealings with pullishers; and I particularly admire the way in which without overloading his book, he finds adequate space for excellent portraits of Dickens's friends.

And what of the man at the center of the story? Y have a renewed sense, as you read Kaplan, that he wa genins of the first order, a tornado of energy, a force for public good. Exactly how likable he was is another matter Kaplan sums up one aspect of his character very we "Generous when unchallenged, his notion of compri-mise was total victory." That in itself was no doubt a trainseparable from his genins. What one is less prepa for, after all the Christmassy sentiments, is how hard a unforgiving he could be.

This side of his character was seen at its worst after t I us slot or ins character was seen at its worst after the break-up of his manage. Anger was inevitable, an understandable; it was angry pride, a determination is prove himself totally in the right, that led him to behavin in many ways, as his daughter Kate said long afterward "like a madman."

"like a madman." Kaplan sets out the whole sorry story of the marriag with notable objectivity. He also establishes more clear than anyone else I have read how closely Dickens decision to start giving public readings was linked to h marital troubles, to his desperate need for an emotion outlet. On the readings themselves, he is first-rate; b then he manages to sustain a high level of intere-through every major episode of the novelist's career, an most of the minor ones.

Waitz: Unprecedented No. 9

New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Grete Waitz's victory Sunday in the women's division was her ninth in the New York Marathon, an apparently unprecedented number for one competition

According to race officials, the Norwegian runner surpassed the record of eight victories set by John J. Kelley in the national Amateur Athletic Union championship at Yonkers from 1956 through 1963, and tied by Demetric Cabanillas in The Deseret News Marathon in Salt Lake City from 1976 through 1984.

Waitz, 35, posted her ninth less than three months after arthroscopic knee surgery. That number's nightmare - Did Not Finish; an experience Waitz had known once before in New York, and in the Olympic marathon Sept. 23 - this time struck Priscilla Welch of Britain, the 1987 women's champion who had overcome four stress fractures this year. She was forced to drop out in the 16th mile because of an injury to her left shoulder.

The Washington Redskins had the ball last, and they beat the New Orleans Saints, 27-24.

Chip Lohmiller, in his first National Football League season, had kicked a 23-yard field goal with 47 seconds left to give the Redskins the victory and keep them a game behind the New York Giants in the National Conference East

The Saints were left hanging on the foot of Morten Anderson, a powerful kicker who earlier had booted a career-long 55-yard field goal. But with nine seconds left, his 49-yard attempt to tie the score had drifted right and short.

The Redskins' fifth straight triumph at home over the Saints ended their road winning streak at 10.

Williams completed 20 of 28 passes for 299 yards and two touchdowns, with Gary Clark and Rickey Sanders each scoring a touchdown. Sanders made five catches for 98 yards and Clark six for 75 yards. Not to be outdone was the Saints' Eric Martin, who caught a game-high 10 passes from Bohby Hebert for 146 yards and a touch-scored on a bootleg right. Cardinals 24, 49ers 23: In Tem-pe, Arizona, Neil Lomax hit Roy Green for a nine-yard touchdown pass with three seconds left and Al Del Greco kicked the extra point to cap a Phoenix rally from a 23-0 deficit. San Francisco gave up 17 points in the last quarter. Bengals 42, Steelers 7: In Cin-cinnati, Eddie Brown set a team record of 216 yards receiving on just seven catches, Boomer Esiason passed for 318 yards and three touchdowns and James Brooks scored three times as the Bengals rolled up 559 yards and posted the largest margin of victory in their rivalry with Pittsburgh.

"What we should do is donate our salaries," said the Steelers' coach. Chuck Noll. "That wasn't professional football."

It was the most yards ever given up by the Steelers, who, at 2-8, are off to their worst start in 20 years.

Colts 38, Jets 14: In Indianapolis, Chris Chandler ran 30 yards for a touchdown and passed for another as the Colts scored 31 unanswered points against New York and won their fourth straight, their longest winning streak since 1977. Indianapolis kicker Dean Biasucci tied an NFL mark with his fifth field goal of at least 50 yards this year when he connected from 51 at the end of the first half.

Broncos 17, Chiefs 11: In Denver, John Elway passed for one touchdown and Sammy Winder ran for another against Kansas City as the Broncos rebounded from two blowout losses.

Bills 13, Seahawks 3: In Seattle, Robh Riddick ran a yard for a tonchdown and Buffalo's defense stretched its streak of not allowing

One runner, an assistant district attorney in Brooklyn, plagued Herscher. He had an unquenchable desire to finish last. "He'd stop in a deli to get something to eat, or he'd go home to Forest Hills for a nap," said Herscher. "For two straight years he thought he'd come in last, only to find out there was someooe behind him, Finally, in his third marathon, he succeed-

NEW YORK - At the moment that Steve Jones hastened across the finish line first in the New York City Marathon, his hair damp with sweat, his strong legs pumping, the crowd in sun-dappled Central Park cheering, the flags waving, the bal-loons floating — someone somewhere was dead last.

At that very moment, someone somewhere was about 23,000th at 12:54 Sunday afternoon, precisely 2 hours, 8 minntes, 20 seconds from the time Jones and the rest of the runners heard the cannon fired on the Staten Island side of the Verrazano Narrows bridge and took off for their 26-mile, 385-yard run. Who was that someone and where was he or she?

"No one knows for sure, but it's probably someone in Bermuda shorts or something, and he or she isn't running, they're most likely walking," said Allan Steinfeld, a race coordi-nator for the sponsoring Road Runners Club, and in charge of the command center at the finish line. "Maybe he's somewhere around the Pulaski Bridge - that's the border of Brooklyn and Queens — and about halfway from the finish." As Grete Waitz crossed the finish line, first among the women

The Associated Press FALKNER, Mississippi — Tishomingo High School was ahead, 16-14, with seven seconds to play. It had the ball on Falkner High School's 40vard line. So David Herbert, the coach, told Dave Herbert, the quarterback, and his son, to hand the ball to Shane Hill - and to tell the tailback to run as fast as he could for Falkner's goal line. "Your daddy must be crazy," said one of the tackles. As Dave Hebert argued with teammates, they were charged a five-yard delay of game penalty.

Figally, Hill set off, ran 55 yards the wrong way, laid down and waited for the clock to run out. A safety. Score fied.

He weighed the chances of going 40 yards on one play against a sturdy defense, or kicking a long field goal. Either was unlikely. Overtime seemed the best bet. David Herbert said he was watching Falkner's coach, Joe Horton, as Hill raced for the wrong goal "and I think he realized what our strategy was. I saw him take off his cap and throw it on the ground." Had Hill been tackled, and Falkner taken the two-point loss, it would have gone to the playoffs. But none of its players had given chase to Hill. In overtime, Tishomingo won, 22-16, on a third-down, two-yard run hy Hill — who finished the

DIDN'T have the national obsession with this case," says Fred Schepisi, talking about his new film, "A Cry in the Dark." The nation in question is Australia, the director's native land. The case is that of Lindy Chamberlain, accused of decapilating her infant daughter, Azaria, during a camping trip in 1980 to Ayers Rock, a popular tourist (and sacred aboriginal) site in the Northern Territory.

Lindy Chamberlain claimed that a dingo - a small, wild mem-ber of the canine family - did it, thus insulting a national mascot and sparking the controversy that roars with life to this day. Though cleared by the first inquest, Chamberlain was eventually convicted of murder and, though pregnant, sentenced to life im-

PEOPLE Glasnost Has Its Effect  On Soviet Arts Awards Writers and filmmakers on the cutting edge of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's glasnost policy were 1988 winners of State Prizes, top artistic awards, the Tass news agency said. Tass said the writer Vladimir Dudintsev won a State Prize for his novel "White Clothes," a story about repression of scientists in the Soviet Union. Other winners included the makers of the film "Is It Easy to be Young?" which has gained enormous popularity for its discussion of youth problems, and the film crew from Kiev that made the documentary "Chernobyl, the Chronology of the Hard Weeks," portraying the nuclear power accident in April 1986, and its conseovences.

Maybe he's no Jack Kennedy, but Dan Quayle looks good in a suit, according to the Tailors Council of America, which chose the Republican vice presidential candidate as the best dressed man in politics. "Although Quayle may have been criticized in many areas, his choice of wardrobe is above criticism," said Jack Taylor, council president. Others chosen were the actor Eddie Murphy, the hockey star Wayne Gretzky, Chrysler Chairman Lee Iscocca, the comedian Don Rickles, the game-show, bost Monty Hall and the ABC anchorman Peter Jennings.

The complete films of Milos Forman, Oscar-winning director of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and "Amadeus," are being bought for distribution in Czechoslovakia 20 years after he left his, native land. A report in the Com-munist Party daily Rude Pravo announced the purchase. "It is great that they will show his films at last, I just don't know why they couldn't do so before," said the actress Vera Kresadlova, Forman's first wife and mother of his twin sons.

The former daredevil Robert (Evel) Knievel and his wife, Linda, owe the U.S. government more than $5.3 million in taxes and penalties for the years 1972-76, a federal judge says. Papers filed by the government in 1987 said the Knievels were $4.8 million in arrears in taxes, interest and penalties. U.S. District Judge Paul Hatfield in Great Falls, Montana, approv the claim when the Knievels failed to file an answer.

GE's WORLD-WIDE EXPANSION SITUATION AND OBJECTIVES

What is CGE's international strategy?

What position do the different CGE subsidiaries occupy in their respective markets?

What ground still has to be covered?

Pierre SUARD accompanied by some of the closest members of his team will answer these questions which are vital for the future of the Group.

On-the-spot accounts of the international situation will be given by directors from some European and Asian subsidiaries.

ECENTRALISATION OF THE GROUP'S STRUCTURE SYNERGY AND AUTONOMY : A PARADOX ?

Decentralisation is the keyword of the CGE organisation. Is this policy holding back the creation of a group spirit ? What is the role of headquarters? Where does the autonomy of the subsidiaries begin and end? Why favour employee share holding?

A critical in-depth examination of CGE's everyday operations including its strong points but not forgetting the offkey items. This debate will be followed by a question and answer session.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT SYNERGY WITHIN THE GROUP RESEARCH, THE KEY TO THE FUTURE

It is obvious : there can be no future without a policy of a clear, powerful and efficient research programme. The main people in charge of the company's research and development programme will explain the policy that they are to initiate, and will report on their strategy, their actions and their objectives. A brief but complete glimpse of how the Group is preparing its technological future.

GE : PAST AND FUTURE CHALLENGES PASSPORT FOR TOMORROW

Past, present and future : in ninety years of existence, CGE has always known how to adapt to its economic environment in order to rise to the very top international ranks in the major sectors of activity of its subsidiaries. The single European market, the emergence of new competitors world-wide, the big financial and industrial manceuvres now taking place in all the major industrialised countries are challenges which the Group must take up now, in order to keep its place at the forefront in tomorrow's world. As part of this topic, Pierre SUARD will explain his objectives in terms of profitability and competitiveness as well as his financial and industrial strategy for CGE, answering written questions from the Convention's attendees.
